STICKS TO STORY ON NAIL HOLES

deferred until he examined the witness. Pope acquiesced. Wilentz began cross-examination of Dr. Hudson on his specimen charts of fingerprints taken from the kidnap ladder.

The witness said he made the charts during March, 1932, from measurements made at the Lindbergh estate from the prints on the ladder.

Q—You read your testimony last night, didn't you? A—No, not a word of it.

Q—Well, you testified yesterday as to a knot and cross nail holes in one of the ladder rails. There is no mention of the nail holes in your charts. Is there? A—No, but I have other charts.

Dr. Hudson insisted he could not recall having seen more than one nail hole in any of the ladder rails.

Q—Now, doctor, you are intelligent. You realize the importance of your testimony concerning the number of nail holes in the rails of that ladder. How many did you see? A—I saw only one square nail hole.

Q—Any nail holes at all? A—Only one square nail hole.

The attorney-general and the witness sawed back and forth for several minutes in this fashion.

Hudson's answer finally was: "No, I saw only one nail hole in the ladder exclusive of the in the rings."

Q—Do you mean to say there is only one nail hole in the ladder outside of the rings? A—No, I said there was only one nail hole at that time (March, 1932).

Wilentz asked if Hudson had made any notes to this effect.

"Not that I recall," the witness said. "I may have."

The attorney-general then held up a section of the ladder and pointed out a nail hole in one of the ladder rails.

Wilentz Angered, Rags Witness

"Was that hole there when you examined the ladder?" he demanded.

"I believe not," said Hudson.

Q—Was it there? A—It was not, in my best knowledge and belief.

This procedure was repeated with several other holes. Each time

Hudson said:

"It was not there when I examined the ladder, to my best knowledge and belief. I am practically certain of this."

Wilentz was plainly angered by the cool, scholarly doctor. He repeated the witness on every answer.

Though Hudson seemed undisturbed by the volatile little Attorney-General, Defense Attorney Pope at one point leaped up and shouted:

"The Attorney-General must not keep stalling the witness."

Q—(To Wilentz) Do the New York police use your silver nitrate process? A—I don't know.

Q—Did you try to induce them to use your process? A—I didn't try to induce them. I showed it to them.

Q—So regardless of the methods of your process the New Jersey state police were not using it on March 1, 1932? A—Yes.

Q—And when you came down you found out they hadn't heard of your process? A—That's so.

Q—That's so.

Hudson's answer finally was: "No, I saw only one nail hole in the ladder exclusive of the in the rings."

Where Is My Papa?

The baby lips of little Manfred Hauptmann aren't accustomed yet to grown-up words. His mother has to whisper his prayers for him at night. But no words are needed to interpret the loneliness and uncomprehending fear in this chubby face. Manfred wants his own father to tuck him into his cozy crib.

to look, apparently without success, for any designation of saw cuts.

The interrogator turned to possible notations of saw cuts in Dr. Hudson's data. He indicated the words "saw cut seven-eighths of an inch."

The witness, after urging by Justice Trenchard, agreed that the saw was his.

Fighting hard to minimize Dr. Hudson's damaging statement that 500 valuable fingerprints were found on the kidnap ladder, none of them Hupman's, Wilentz finally got the witness to admit the rainy weather the night of the kidnaping would have obliterated some of the prints and affected others.

Q—You say you can retain fingerprints a couple of years under normal conditions. Now, would you consider misty, damp weather such as that outside the Lindbergh home normal? A—It would not affect the fingerprints unless it rained on the wood.

Q—What about damp, muggy ground? A—That would have some effect. That condition would not be entirely normal.

Q—And if it was wet such fingerprints as were there on the part contacting the ground would be obliterated? A—Yes.

Hudson don't argue with me, doctor.

He asked the expert if he thought his silver nitrate process was a good method and Hudson replied: "I do."

The attorney general asked Hudson if he counted all the fingerprints, and he replied he did not. Wilentz wanted to know how then could he testify there were 500.

The witness reminded Wilentz he had said "about 500." He said he saw the police developing that number under the silver nitrate process.

Asked if he knew how to classify fingerprints, Dr. Hudson said: "I have classified some." He did this in 1929.

Asked if he had a magnifying glass when he went to the Lindbergh estate on March 13, 1932, he said he "used a small glass."

Q—Do you know that the fingerprints of Trooper Kelly who helped take the fingerprints from the ladder and handled it all the time were not brought out by the silver nitrate process? A—Kelly wore gloves when he handled the ladder.

Q—Do you know that the prints of Trooper Kelly were not brought out by your process? A—(Calmly) He wore gloves, too.

Q—Well, he knows that the fingerprints of Colonel Lindbergh, who didn't wear gloves when handling the ladder, were never brought out by your process? A—No, I don't know that.

Dr. Hudson admitted that if dozens of persons super-imposed their fingerprints over the same surface of the ladder this would obliterate the prints.

The witness was handed a small photographic copy of a print and asked could he classify that print.

"It would have to be enlarged," replied Dr. Hudson. "You would have to put it under a microscope glass."

The reason he did not use a microscope glass on the prints, he found at the Lindbergh home, was because "there were too many of them," he explained.

Q—Do you know this is a picture of one of your own silver nitrate developments? A—It's a very poor photograph.

Q—If it couldn't be because it's a very poor process? A—(No answer).

Wilentz asked Dr. Hudson if he was an expert on photography and he replied: "No, I am not."

Sure It Was Rail He Saw

The attorney-general went over to the kidnap ladder. Pounding the ladder with the flat of his hand, he shouted at the top of his voice:

"You are sure you saw this 'rail' of the kidnap ladder in March, 1932, aren't you?"

"Yes," said Hudson.

Asked if it came from a board in Hauptmann's attic, then it came from Hauptmann's attic, didn't it? A—Yes. If it came from his attic it came from his attic. Wilentz wanted to know if Hudson found fingerprints on any of the toys in the Lindbergh nursery.

Hudson said he had.

He admitted his process does not work very well on painted surfaces.

Hauptmann once had kept his hands on the window sill all night and still the prints wouldn't have shown," demanded Wilentz.

There was no answer.

The witness denied he ever had made accusations against six men who were later proved innocent when he was in the navy in 1920.

Dr. Hudson was handed the "kidnap ladder" and told:

"Put a big circle around the nail hole you first saw and put in it—your name is Hudson—put the 'h' above the circle."

This the witness did.

Q—You are sure about the nail hole? Just one nail hole? A—Yes.

Q—If in 1932 government men from Washington, and from Wisconsin, and policemen from the State of New Jersey, said there were four nail holes, would you still say you were right and they were mistaken?

Defense Attorney Pope leaped to his feet with an objection. The objection was sustained.

Telling of examining the toys in the Lindbergh baby's nursery, Hudson said some of the toys revealed prints, some did not. He described as "ordinary."

Hudson said he had not taken fingerprints from the beer stain (which sat on the sill of the Lindbergh nursery).

"On a non-absorbing surface," he explained, "the process is not used."

Wilentz finished his examination with a polite, "Thank you, doctor."

Re-direct Examination

On re-direct examination, Defense Attorney Pope said:

"Please tell us why you happened to notice there was just one nail hole in the ladder rail 16."

"Well," began Hudson, "I noticed a big circle around the nail hole you first saw and put in it—your name is Hudson—put the 'h' above the circle."

Dr. E. M. HUDSON
"Too Many Nail Holes"

They might not be. It only takes a small fragment—

Q—Never mind, there would be interference anyway, wouldn't there? A—Yes. There would be interference.

Q—Do you know how many of the 500 fingerprints taken from the ladder were of value for identification? A—I did not see the photographs.

Q—Do you not know, A—No.

Q—Did you ever testify as a fingerprint expert before? A—Yes. Once for the Department of Justice in 1929.

Q—But as a chemical expert, not a fingerprint expert? A—I was classified as a fingerprint expert.

Q—But for testimony on the chemistry? A—For classification.

Wilentz grew testy at one point and said to the witness:

"Hudson don't argue with me, doctor."

He asked the expert if he thought his silver nitrate process was a good method and Hudson replied: "I do."

The attorney general asked Hudson if he counted all the fingerprints, and he replied he did not. Wilentz wanted to know how then could he testify there were 500.

DOCTOR HUDSON NO PHILO VANCE Adela St. Johns Says LADDER WAS HANDLED EVEN BY NEWSMEN, SHE ASSERTS

By ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS
Flemington, N. J., Feb. 7.—This time the brilliant amateur rode in on his hobby horse and to all intents and practical purposes was uneaten in open court.

Mr. Philo Vance may do it, Mr. Fortune may do it, Mr. Sherlock Holmes may have done it, but Dr. Erasmus Hudson just didn't measure up to the generally accepted formula.

Under a particularly devastating cross-examination by Attorney General Wilentz, who was in great form, Dr. Hudson finally appeared to be in the Flemington courtroom as a very nice man, whose hobby for fingerprinting didn't have very much to do with this particular matter in hand.

Here is the sweet and simple story of Dr. Erasmus Hudson.

He thought up a silver nitrate process for getting fingerprints without no fingerprints had been before.

Reilly Sees Acquittal In One Hour

By Associated Press
Flemington, N. J., Feb. 7.—Speculation on what the Italian man trial jury will decide has begun among the lawyers.

Edward J. Reilly, chief defender for Bruno Hauptmann, predicted today:

"Acquittal in one hour." Reilly said. "I don't think the jury will have time for deliberation, but I am sure of conviction in short order. Reilly added that if the jury did not return a verdict in one hour, it would continue study of the evidence for 36 hours before reaching a decision.

The defense attorney based his guess not only on the evidence but on the fact the jury must return a verdict of first degree murder or acquit. A recommendation of insanity, carrying life imprisonment, also is a possibility.

No One Uses Is

In 1920 he offered it to the New York police department. As far as he knows—or anybody else knows—that matter is not now being used by the state of New York, which is pretty keen about getting rid of new methods of catching criminals.

On March 11, 1932, the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped.

Outside the Lindbergh house was discovered a ladder, a strange ladder. A ladder which had not been there before. It was a moist and heavy night, there had been a hard rain, and the ladder was found in the back yard, and the ladder was on the ground.

On March 2, Trooper Frank A. Kelly of the New Jersey Kellogg examined the ladder for fingerprints. He didn't find any fingerprints, so Colonel Schenkopf told him to go back and do it all over again, which he did with the help of another man or two in his department.

There is still an finger print which could possibly be used by the methods in use in every police department in the United States.

Handled by Neusmen

The ladder became the subject of great interest from there on. I remember at least one of the reporters who handled it.

It was against the wall, the crime commissioner of the Governor of New Jersey handed it over to the police.

On March 13, a very nice man named Dr. Erasmus Hudson offered the ladder with a new process he had discovered from the ancient French, a process of silver nitrate, not much or violet ray.

Now the New Jersey state police weren't overlooking anything. All they were rapping at straw at the time, trying in every way they knew to find some one who had kidnapped.

So they gave Dr. Hudson every facility and he fingerprinted the ladder and found several fingerprints and fragments of prints, which he sent to all the newspapers.

Some of them were Hauptmann's and none of them could be identified with any suspect in the case at the time.

Dr. Hudson's only importance in this case actually is that he positively asserted that when he examined the ladder on March 13, there was only one nail hole in it. This is evidence of a very high order. If it is correct, because the state says that there were four and that those nail holes made with certain other nail holes in a beam in Hauptmann's attic.

The implication would unquestionably be, in fact Mr. Reilly did not hesitate to state last night, that the police took a look at Hauptmann's attic and punched the holes in to match.

However, there are certain very definite reasons to suspect that Dr. Erasmus Hudson might be slightly mistaken in his statement.

He might just possibly, perhaps swayed in his excitement at being part of the great manhunt, at actually pursuing his beloved hobby in the midst of these great events, he might just possibly have overlooked those other three nail holes.

After all, Dr. Erasmus Hudson's hobby is fingerprints and not nail holes.

1325 LOSE JOBS

R. I. Mill to Close

Providence, Feb. 7 (AP).—The first blow in the recently announced plans for the closing of three cotton mills of the R. B. and R. Knight Corporation today came with the news that the Royal Mills at Riverpoint, R. I., would shut down tomorrow night.

The mills employ 1325 workers in good times.

The concern's Arctic mill, with a peak employment of 450, will close in two weeks. The Grant mill here, employing about 300, is the third plant affected by the liquidation.

Vallees Might Change Theme "YOUR DIME IS MY DIME-!"

When Fay was gay as Mrs. Vallees back in '32, she pranced and danced as though entranced and never thought she'd sue. But now she's sad and Rudy's mad and there's a change in rhyme. The way she sings the theme song now is "Your dime is my dime."

Wood Jackets, Glass Capes on New Gowns

Paris, Feb. 7.—Wooden jackets, glass capes, and sex-appeal dresses with peek-a-boo effects poised on curvaceous mannequins, left the audience breathless after today's spring-summer fashion previews.

The wooden jacket, introduced by Jean Patou, was of brown wood-textured fabric, worn with a green skirt and hat.

The glass cape, also shown by Patou, suggested that there will be less gossip next season. For the well-known adage may become:

"Women in glass capes should not throw stones."

These capes, of a new glass fabric, glittered with every glint of light and were shown over lace-trimmed, ultra-dressy evening gowns of shimmering white satin.

Patou's selective evening gown with tips already as frantically as machine and baste covered only by thin, pointed pieces of fabric caught with one look in the middle of the diaphanous, gave much eye-brow lifting.

More afternoon cocktail-line and evening gowns had cut off effects on the bodies, filled in with transparent or chiffon, and some evening gowns had cut-outs revealing nothing but the bare skin, almost as naughtily as a burlesque show.

HUNDREDS FREED

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—With the anniversary of "Bloody Tuesday" fast past, the police today released all but 66 of the 1251 Communists they arrested in yesterday's riots.

Of the 56 still held, 23 are foreigners. They will be expelled from France; the rest will be processed on a charge of carrying forbidden weapons.

London, Oct. 7 (AP).—David Melner, 35-year-old former Cincinnati and Detroit bookmaker, faced a term of 15 years in the penitentiary today for the kidnapping of John A. Labatt, wealthy brewer.

A jury convicted him on three counts, two alleging kidnapping and the third armed robbery.

G. F. McFarland immediately pronounced a sentence of 15 years on each conviction and ordered that the terms run concurrently.

RUDY Record on Fay PLAYED WEBB DENIES VOICES TRUE

For the witness stand during cross-examination of Mrs. Vallees' father, Clarence E. Webb, a plain-spoken man who day before yesterday testified that his son-in-law was "no angel."

Questioning the witness concerning a confidential telephone call which he put through from Santa Monica, Cal., to his daughter in New York, Bushel asked Webb:

Declares He Did

"Did you give the phone to your wife?"

Webb, police chief of Santa Monica, replied in the affirmative.

"Did you hear your wife say this to your daughter?" asked Bushel.

"Has Garfield been around the house?"

"I did not," said Webb.

This telephone conversation took place after Vallees had called his father-in-law, saying "Things are getting beyond my control," and asking him to come to New York.

Bushel continued: "When you told him your wife meant by 'Garfield'?"

"I knew a young man named Garfield," said Webb.

The "Garfield" referred to by Webb, said Bushel, was once said Mrs. Vallees for alienation of affections.

Further questioning brought out that Webb is an adagio dancer by profession.

"I will see if I can refresh your memory," said Bushel.

Over objections by Thomas I. Sheridan, Mrs. Vallees' counsel, the record was played in the machine.

Justice Salvatore Contino thought it would be all right "just to refresh the memory of the witness."

"I hope there will be no singing in it," commented Sheridan, and the cacophony began.

BILL PROPOSES

CCC Reserves

Washington, Feb. 7 (AP).—An enlisted reserve force of more than 10,000 partially trained young men recruited from CCC camps is proposed in a bill now being drafted by General Douglas MacArthur, Army Chief of Staff.

MacArthur's bill, being drawn at the suggestion of the House military committee, would provide for voluntary enlistment of CCC camp graduates for two months intensive military training after which they would revert to inactive status.

One Voice Heard

A feminine voice could be distinctly heard saying, "I don't know anything about it," and "that's very funny." The other voices were just a blue cloud.

"Do you remember the voices?" Bushel asked Webb.

"I do not," Webb said heatedly.

"That is not my voice, not my daughter's voice, not my wife's voice."

500,000 HOMES

Aim for N. Y. Slums

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia plans to ask the Federal government for $150,000,000 to start the job of lifting 500,000 families from the slums.

He declared here that the city housing authority, to which $20,000,000 in PWA funds already has been placed, is ready to go ahead with the construction of low-rent dwellings as fast as money could be obtained.

Fleischmann Sued for $100,000

New York, Feb. 7.—Superior Court Justice Louis A. Valentine issued a warrant today attaching $2,000 of the property in this state of Major Max C. Fleischmann.

Declares He Did

"Did you give the phone to your wife?"

Webb, police chief of Santa Monica, replied in the affirmative.

"Did you hear your wife say this to your daughter?" asked Bushel.

"Has Garfield been around the house?"

"I did not," said Webb.

This telephone conversation took place after Vallees had called his father-in-law, saying "Things are getting beyond my control," and asking him to come to New York.

Bushel continued: "When you told him your wife meant by 'Garfield'?"

"I knew a young man named Garfield," said Webb.

The "Garfield" referred to by Webb, said Bushel, was once said Mrs. Vallees for alienation of affections.

Further questioning brought out that Webb is an adagio dancer by profession.

"I will see if I can refresh your memory," said Bushel.

AMNESIA Woman KNOWN

IDENTIFIED AS MEDFORD WIFE

An amnesia victim, who wandered into a Malden filling station today, was identified as Mrs. Ernest Cella of 165 Grant avenue, Medford.

She was identified by means of a slip of paper bearing the name of D. F. Campbell, which was found in her handbag. It proved to be the name of her landlord. Campbell and his wife hurried to the Malden police station. There they identified Mrs. Cella.

Mrs. Cella, bewildered, wandered into the Elm Lodge filling station, on Pleasant street, near Highland avenue, Malden, this morning. To Lambert C. Chick, the attendant, she said:

"Where am I?"
"I don't know where I'm going," she had a vague idea that she had left her home last night. But she did not know where it was. She did not even know her name.

Police broadcast a description of the bewildered woman. She was wearing a seakiss coat and a black silk dress with a white collar.

As soon as she was identified, her husband, an employee of the Western Union Telegraph Company, at 25 Elm street, Boston, was notified. He started at once for his wife's side.

3 FACE TRIAL

New York, Feb. 7 (AP)—Three men charged with the collision between the steamers Lexington and June Christensen on the night of January 2, in which at least four lives were lost, the steamboat inspection service today ordered the captain of the two ships and the pilot of the Christensen to appear for trial March 21.

The codes would be limited to industries engaged in interstate commerce.

NEW NRA Indorsed by C. OF C.

TRADE LEADERS OUTLINE PLAN

By John T. Lambert
Washington, Feb. 7—Substantial American business interests are willing to go along with President Roosevelt on a new and simple NRA.

Their program has been stated to him by President Henry I. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

They are ready to accept a permanent NRA which will abolish child labor, fix minimum wages for workers, eradicate unfair trade practices and eliminate bureaucratic control from Washington that could impede business recovery.

This program represents the majority sentiment of the industrialists, bankers and commercial tradesmen who are members of the chamber.

Unless they get this program they will contest any attempt by the President to obtain a radical NRA from Congress. The important details of their plan are as follows: Each industry would be allowed to write its own code and bring it to Washington only for approval or rejection by the National government.

Price-fixing and control of production would be barred, except when any industry might convince the government they were necessary to the industry.

8 Fined After Bet Raids in Everett

They laughed when he reported a number pool headquarters and a horse-race betting office on his last, Patrolman J. J. O'Donnell of Everett police testified today in Malden court.

Nothing he could say would convince his superiors, the policeman declared.

Patrolman O'Donnell was testifying in connection with two raids made a week ago, one on an alleged number pool headquarters in Robbins street and another on an alleged horse-race betting office in Lynde street.

Heavy fines were assessed against eight men out of the raids, but all appealed.

FRANK P. MARIN, Antonio C. Tello, Michael Ferraro, and Samuel Quinto, all of Everett, were fined $100 each on charges of setting up and promoting a lottery.

Arthur LePell and Frank Marconi, also of Everett, were fined the same amount for allegedly registering horse-race bets.

Joseph DiPiano of Robbins street, charged by police with being the owner of the house at that address, appealed a fine of $100, as did Antonio Peascone of Lynde street, charged with being owner of the house where the horse bets were registered.

STEPHEN VOLK, Painter, Dies

Fryeburg, Me., Feb. 7 (AP)—Stephen A. Douglas Volk, 79, noted American portrait painter, died here today.

Famed for three portraits of Abraham Lincoln, Volk was working on a fourth until his health grew feeble recently.

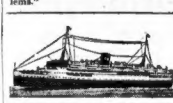

Volk also was famed for portraits of King Albert of Belgium, David Lloyd George, wartime premier of Great Britain, and General John J. Pershing.

ROGER BABSON Optimistic, But—

Los Angeles, Feb. 7 (INS)—Roger Babson, noted economist, declared he is as optimistic today concerning the economic outlook for the next three years as he was pessimistic in 1929.

"Business is better," the statistician said, "but the stimulus is false. I fear we must combat a very serious situation some three years from now. By that time, however, President Roosevelt and his brain-trusters may have evolved more sound methods of dealing with our problems."

A contrast in CLIPPERS

FANCY the astonishment of Shipbuilder Donald McKay if he had been told that New Englanders would build a craft to skim the sea lanes at a speed of 150 knots!

In June, 1851, his famous Boston-built clipper ship Flying Cloud left the foot of Maiden Lane on New York's waterfront. Thirty-seven days later she was scudding past Buenos Aires. On her ninetieth day outward bound she dropped anchor in Frisco harbor and an astonished world marveled at her speed.

Today, Bridgeport-built clippers of the Pan American Airways have flashed through the seven thousand mile route between Miami and Buenos Aires in five days.

Progress! Yes, and impressive testimony that Yankee ingenuity is not confined to history books.

The ability of this bank to keep pace with the changing needs of its customers for 150 years is the best proof of its fitness to serve you today.

2000-MILE FLIGHT, KILLING BARED

Body in Auto Trunk

By Associated Press

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 7.—A murder suspect's 2000-mile motor car ride with the body of his alleged victim was disclosed at a police outpost on the California-Nevada border today and solved the mysterious disappearance of a Kalamazoo, Mich., trucking contractor and his employee.

Clarence Frechette, 25, the driver of the machine, was reported by Captain Joseph Blake of the state highway patrol to have confessed he shot Robert Brown, 25, his employer, at Howell, Michigan, January 29.

Then, Frechette said, he carried the body in the trunk of the machine for nine days, Blake disclosed.

With the fleeing suspect were three hitch-hikers, a man, a woman and a little boy.

Captain Blake quoted Frechette as saying Brown was killed after the latter had told of intimate relations with Frechette's "girl friend."

Gun Fired Twice

Brown's purported admission was made nine days ago, Blake quoted Frechette as saying, while the pair were driving from Kalamazoo to Pontiac, Mich. The asserted confession read:

"I knocked him down. He crawled to the car and grabbed that gun. He pointed it at me and I grabbed his hand."

"I don't know whether it was his finger or mine, but the gun fired twice."

"I put him in the trunk and I didn't know whether he was dead or alive."

Blake said Frechette, a former convict once known as "The Flying Bandit," began the strange flight the next night.

It was intended to end in China, the purported confession said. But it ended abruptly because Sheriff

Charles W. Struble of Kalamazoo had a hunch Brown had been killed.

The officer's guess was based on a telegram and signed "Robert" asking the contractor's father to telegraph $50 in care of a Sacramento hotel. The sheriff telegraphed Sacramento police.

"Flying Bandit"

While Frechette underwent the border inspection at Truckee, Cal., Highway Patrolman Frank Carson lifted the lid of the trunk.

He stared down into the eyes of young Brown, shot twice through the head.

In his asserted confession, Frechette cleared his three passengers of any connection with the crime.

However, officers held the three for investigation. They are John William Rivas, Salt Lake City, Mr. Victor Messenger, Alameda, Calif., and her young son.

In a pocket of the automobile was the .22 calibre automatic pistol which the confession said was the death weapon.

Officers said he will be held at Nevada City, Cal., for Michigan autopsy.

Frechette became known as "The Flying Bandit" seven years ago when he was convicted of slugging his flying instructor, Harry W. Anderson, with a hammer during a flight from Pontiac.

He was paroled from prison after serving the minimum of a six to ten-year sentence.

MEXICO

Action by U.S. BACKED

BAY STATE MEN URGE PROBE

By Associated Press
Washington, Feb. 7 (AP)—The movement to force the Government to some action on charges of persecution of Catholics in Mexico, launched last December by Representative Higgins of Boston, appeared today to be gaining momentum in Congress, although success still seemed remote.

Since Higgins called on the President to withdraw Ambassador Daniels from Mexico and subsequently introduced in the House a resolution calling for severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico, the Knights of Columbus, Senator Borah and others have taken up the matter, with other members of Congress.

Borah's resolution would provide for a senatorial investigation and brought from Senator Walsh of Massachusetts a statement expressing hope it may receive early consideration. Representatives Fish and Celler of New York have introduced conditions in the southern republic.

Representative Cunnery of Massachusetts probably will speak on the situation Monday.

While Higgins' persistence in pressing his demand for action against Mexico is causing the State Department annoyance, it apparently has had no effect on his standing in the House.

The Boston Representative has been given a chairmanship of sub-committee of the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, making him the only first term member on that committee to hold a sub-committee chairmanship.

TODAY

harder than the President, no man in the world carries responsibilities involving so many difficult problems.

It is unjust to himself, his family and the public interest for him to remain in the White House, under the existing pressure, for more than four weeks at a stretch.

He should get away from Congress, telephones, reporters, job man, and the dimming "thin red line" of worried rich men, for at least three weeks in every sixty days.

If it should seem necessary, after the Supreme Court "gold decision" is published, to close the Stock Exchange, the exchange would like President Roosevelt to order it closed.

When in doubt, let the President do it. Before long you will have mothers asking the President to order them to wean the baby.

Many believe that the Supreme Court will announce by divided vote a decision against the administration, upholding the so-called "gold clause" contracts. Such a decision might explain the Supreme Court's delay, based on a desire to give the government time to arrange for an emergency.

It is probable, however, that the government has made its arrangements long since.

Declaration of a "twenty-year gold payment moratorium" might meet the situation.

The Supreme Court has no direct connection with the citizens or control over them, except through the White House, and the citizens could not well be penalized for obeying an order of their own government.

The Supreme Court, remembering the statement of Grover Cleveland's Tammany friend, "What is the Constitution between friends?" may have decided that this is not a good time for the Supreme Court and the government to work at cross purposes.

The letter of the Constitution tells the Supreme Court to enforce contracts, common sense tells the Supreme Court not to throw a bombshell into a situation that has been "blown sky-high" already.

RFC $75 Price On $100 "Baby Bond"

Washington, Feb. 7 (AP)—Twin bonds designed to aid depression-ridden realty were said to be in progress today at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Acting under authority of the new RFC act, that agency was drafting regulations for the establishment of mortgage associations to refinance apartments and hotels forced into receivership, representing combined investments of 15,000 million dollars.

The purpose was to unlock these "frozen" assets by providing a market for the securities.

Help to individual home owners was contemplated in the legislation, under which the RFC proposed to aid the Federal Home Loan Corporation in setting up national mortgage associations which, when they began to function, can refinance insured individual mortgages up to $15,000.

The amount of the first "baby bond" issue was not disclosed.

President Roosevelt will have the first bond.

CAPE MAN Saved From ICE FIELD

Nantucket, Mass., Feb. 7 (AP)—Jeremiah Towhill, brewery fireman, of Nantucket Island, trapped all night on an ice field, was rescued today by coastguards.

Suffering from cold and hunger, Towhill was brought to the Masted Coast Guard station and after being fed, appeared little the worse for his experience.

One of the four men marooned on Muskeget Island, 15 miles northwest of Nantucket, Towhill yesterday decided to come here. His boat became trapped in the ice when he was midway between Tuckernick Island and Bol Point.

A blinker light, flashing through the darkness, last night informed Coastguard of his plight and he was sighted at daybreak.

MISSING Girl Mother 'ALIVE'

HOPE SEEN IN OXFORD HUNT

Oxford, Feb. 7.—State Detective Edward J. McCarthy, in charge of a 10-weeks' search for Etta Riel, 20, missing Teachers' College student, announced today he believes her alive.

He said: "I believe she will communicate with friends because of the air now being made over her disappearance."

The girl vanished last November when due to appear in court to press a charge against Henry Edwin of Oxford, Bates College student, as the alleged father of her daughter, now four months old.

Burning love letters from Edwin to her have been found among her belongings since she disappeared, the authorities assert.

Search has been made without result by McCarthy for a record of a secret marriage, following a statement by the missing girl's sister.

The night before she vanished she and Edwin visited the sister and another woman. Edwin said he then drove Etta to the Worcester Railroad Station.

NAZI ASSASSIN Fails in Austria

Vienna, Feb. 7. (AP)—An insane Nazi's attempt to assassinate an Austrian cabinet minister in the chancellery yesterday was reported today.

Authorities were said to be making every effort to keep the assassin secret. The assassin, the report said, asked to see the minister without explaining the object of his visit.

Missing Girl Mother

Heartbreak hadn't saddened the life of pretty Etta Riel, above, when she posed for this picture with a pet dog and a little neighbor. The young woman has been missing from Oxford for more than ten weeks, but she is still alive, authorities believe.

Wilmington, Calif., Feb. 7. (AP)—Sailing to meet her famous explorer husband whom she hasn't seen in 17 months, Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd was bound for New Zealand today aboard the steamer Mariposa. She expects to rejoin Admiral Byrd at Dunedin, New Zealand.

"I have planned this trip since Mr. Byrd's expedition left the United States in 1933," said Mrs. Byrd, "and for some time have been anticipating joining him in New Zealand with keen delight."

U. S. Cuts Diplomatic Forces in Russia

By Associated Press

Moscow, Feb. 7.—The withdrawal of the United States naval and aviation attaches, the abolition of the United States consulate-general, and the announcement by the State Department at Washington that there will be further reductions in the Moscow embassy staff was the main subject of discussion in foreign circles here today.

These sudden reductions were the more interesting because they followed so closely on the announcement by Secretary of State Hull that the Soviet-United States det negotiations are hopeless.

The abolition of the United States consulate-general from Russia does not mean that Soviet Russia will be without American consular offices, as there is one consul, August F. Ward, and one vice-consul, Elbridge Durbrow, still in Moscow handling consular affairs.

However, it now seems unlikely that American consular offices will be established in Leningrad, Odessa and Vladivostok as contemplated when the prospects for a trade agreement between the United States and Russia were bright.

50-50 Old Age Plan OPPOSED

STATES FEAR TAX BURDEN

By International News Service
Washington, Feb. 7.—
The administration's plan to finance old-age pensions on a 50-50 basis with states was endangered today as pressure increased for direct federal grants with no strings attached.

Unless a change is made in the program devised by President Roosevelt's economic security committee, the House ways and means committee was told, many states face back-breaking taxes.

For that state governments confronted with an enormous cost would deny old-age benefits until property is reduced, was expressed by congressmen who are fighting for direct federal grants.

Under the administration's plan the federal government would match state contributions, but not pay more than 50 per cent and not more than $15 a month for each pensioner.

Compromise Plan

A compromise plan, under which the federal government would contribute at least $15 a month for each pensioner for the first three or four years, leaving the states to supply what additional they could, is being advocated by a bloc of Southern members.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal to eliminate federal grants for "unearned" annuities, plan appeared to have gained the committee's support.

The effect of the proposal would be to increase the burden of the states in caring for aged who are now too old to build up a fund for take care of themselves through the payroll and earnings taxes.

Love Letters of Napoleon Knows Wife Untrue; Still Writes of His Love

ASKS WHO HAS TAKEN HIS PLACE

By HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON

Author of "The Story of Man-kind," "The Story of the Bible," and "Who Has Spent the Last Five Years Making an Intimate Study of the Napoleonic Period."

Napoleon's letters to Josephine show clearly, almost painfully, that Napoleon had other things on his mind besides defeating the Austrians and forcing the Archduke Charles to abandon his contemplated invasion of France.

The so-called campaign of Italy in 1797 was such a campaign as the world had never before seen.

Up to the arrival of Napoleon, a campaign had been a sort of scientific chess game.

The French Revolution made an end to all this.

The upheaval brought a great many men to the fore who, under the old system, would never have had a chance to rise above the rank of a sergeant-major, but who now proved themselves to be leaders of exceptional ability.

Napoleon

Greatest of Them

And the greatest of those was the little Corsican half-pay lieutenant and ex-book agent, Napoleon Bonaparte.

Keep this well in mind when you read the letters of this love-sick boy. They are astonishing

Josephine, as seen in another work of Isabey documents in their utter humility.

To Josephine in Milan:
Marmirolo, 29 Messidor,
9 o'clock in the Evening.
(17 July, 1796)

I have your letter, my adorable darling; it has filled my heart with joy. I'm greatly obliged for the trouble you have taken to give me the news of yourself. Your health must be better today. I'm sure that you are cured. I advise you strongly to ride horseback; that can't help but do you good.

Since I left you I've been constantly depressed. My happiness is to be near you. I constantly I long calling to mind—our kisses, your tears, your little jealousies, and the glances of the incomparable Josephine light, without ceasing, a live and burning flame in my heart and in my senses.

Ah! I beg you, let me see some of your faces; be less beautiful, less graceful, less tender, less good, above all, above all, never be jealous, never cry, your tears rob me of reason, burn my blood. Believe me, it's no longer within my power to think of anything but you, or to have an idea that doesn't concern you.

Sleep well; get back your health. Come back to me, and at least, before we die, we can say for these many days we were happy.

Millions of kisses, and even one for Fortune (Josephine's dog), despite his bad manners.

BONAPARTE.

Knew Wife

Was Unfaithful

The letter that now follows has never been published. It is a recent discovery. It is not very important except for one fact. It shows how desperately Napoleon was in love with his wife in spite of all he had then come to learn about her.

By this time, however, Josephine knew her little Bonaparte.

She realized that he would derive infinitely more joy from torturing himself on account of his further suspicions than from satisfying his desire for revenge by having the fellow shot. And she was right, dead right.

21 July, 1796.

I hope before this evening that I'll receive one of your letters. You know, my dear Josephine, I think better of you than that. I'm sure it pleases you to write them. Perhaps you've found that lover there whom you came there to find.

Only you will have found him without any assistance from me. Am I right or not? Surely not, I think better of you than that. By the way, I'm told that the gentleman you recommend to me. If this is so, you're certainly a monster.

What are you doing at this moment? Sleeping, I suppose. And, alas, I am not there to drink in your breath, study your beauties, drown you with kisses. Far from you the nights are long, dull and sad. And you one regrets that it isn't always night.

Adieu, my beautiful and good, my ever good and sweetest, and incompensable and divine beloved. A thousand loving kisses, everywhere, everywhere.

B. B.

Verona, first Primaire, an Y
29 November, 1796

I'm going to bed, my little Josephine, my heart full of your adorable images, and so to rest; but I hope in several days that I will be happier and can at my ease give you proofs of that ardent love that you inspire in me.

You don't write me any more; don't you think any more of your good sweetest, cruel woman?

Don't you know that without you, without your heart, without your love, there would be no life happiness nor life for your husband?

Good God! How happy I should be if I could help you as you dressed yourself so charmingly, that pretty little shoulder, that white little bosom, above all, that little face framed in a handkerchief worn a la creole, so cute I'd like to eat it.

To live with Josephine about me is to live in the Elysée Palace. Kisses for your mouth, your eyes, your shoulder, everything, everything!

(Unlabeled)

Verona, Nov. 13, 1796.

I do not love you any more at all; on the contrary, I hate you. You are a naughty, clumsy, ugly girl.

You do not love me at all; you do not love my husband; you know the stronger your letters give him and yet you do not even dash off six nasty lines.

What do you do all day, Madame? What important business is there that deprives you of the time to write your ardent lover?

What attachment is casting aside the tender and constant love you promised him?

Who can this new and marvelous love be who absorbs your every moment, tyrannizes your day and stops you from paying any attention to your husband? Josephine be on your guard; one fine night the doors will break open, and there'll be me.

I hope before long to squeeze you in my arms and to cover you with a million kisses as burning as the equator.

BONAPARTE.

Rides to Milan,

Finds Her Gone

After this last letter, Napoleon could no longer bear the separation.

He took a few days leave, rode like mad to Milan where his beloved wife was undoubtedly waiting for him, rushed into her apartment and discovered that the lady had gone off to Genoa for a few days pleasure trip but without letting him know of her plans.

Milan, Nov. 27, 1796.

I arrive in Milan, I rush into your apartment.

I left everything to come to see you, to press you in my arms, and you weren't even there; you're running around the towns to parties.

You disappear just when I arrive. You don't care any more for your dear Napoleon. It was only a caprice that made you love him, and now your inconstancy makes you indifferent.

Make a round of all the pleasures. Happiness is made for you. The whole world is simply too happy to please you, and only your husband is very, very unhappy.

BONAPARTE.

BLACK- HAired, tailor-made, highly intelligent, no visible makeup—that's a portrait of the girl to whom Washington is trying to fit a Cinderella slipper.

She is Helen McCollum, the 25-year-old secretary to David C. Elliott, chief of the statistical division of the RFC. Perhaps she would have never met "Bill" Dern, son of the Secretary of War, if they hadn't both been employed in that particular alphabetical branch of the government service.

Bill is distinctly good-looking and the type to find favor with debutantes who "dance the night away," and are to be found at cocktail parties and country clubs every afternoon. But as far back as two years ago, it was noticed that Bill Dern did not belong to the "Debutante Delight" group.

Not that Helen McCollum is a very cocktail party—the "Capital" scores up one match for propriety. And with its new alphas—business women with you, a people from all over the country, and having a greater population than it had during the World War, seems to be the great matrimonial agency par excellence of the country.

Not that Helen McCollum is a type-black-haired, business-like, a person Irish with a dash of the quiet good that is so refreshing in a woman.

Bill Dern, with her features, is well enough, follow the trade of a young man, has a student at the University of California, and is a member of the family would be a good match with her.

Secretary Dern said, "but the young lady has to tell you the story of the wedding." Miss McCollum has not yet told the story, but has indicated it will be a happy one.

FAIR PLAY

Teach Child Its True Meaning

By LISA GREENLEE

THERE is no use in teaching your children to expect fairness all the time and on every count.

But you can, I think, safely assume them that eventually, in the long run, they will get what is theirs.

It is a secret action, word or thought that destroys the person who is not fair.

Delicious in Chocolate Cake

By MARTHA LEE

AN UNKNOWN reader sends the following: "I have two recipes for chocolate cake that call for one cup of sour milk and brown sugar. Since one recipe calls for one cup sugar and the other says two cups, I am at a loss which to follow. The rest of the ingredients and measurements are about the same. Won't you please answer in the paper?"

This question is very difficult to answer without knowing the proportions of the other ingredients and measurements are about the same. Won't you please answer in the paper?"

Informal Reception

By M. J. Beckham

I am planning to be married next week. We are not having a very big affair. My parents want to have a very small reception for us, and I would like to know what would be proper to have and what not to have. I am not sure of the proper things to have and what not to have. I am not sure of the proper things to have and what not to have.

at the Parker House

I am is broiled with Gulden's mustard

It's deservedly popular—Deviled Ham Gulden at Boston's Parker House, famous for fine food. Chef John J. Bonello, master of the art of seasoning, gives his recipe: "Spread slice of ham on both sides with Gulden's Prepared Mustard (mixed with one raw egg if desired). Dip lightly in bread crumbs. Broil or pan broil in a little butter."

Serve it at home—your family will praise it. Be sure to use Gulden's for perfect results.

This Is Life

by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

That writer of today whose book is fortunate enough to fall into Elsie Robinson's hands will find himself indebted to her for a more enthusiastic piece of writing than he is liable to get from any other critic I know of.

It may be an enthusiasm of approval. It may be (rarely) an enthusiasm, even a violence, of disapproval. But one thing he may be sure of. It will not be lukewarm.

It will not straddle. Nothing Elsie Robinson ever writes will land her in that particular portion of hell that Dante reserved for "feminists" and people who do not know their own minds. All this is apropos of a little book of somewhat over a hundred pages, made up of some of Elsie Robinson's past columns in this newspaper which, I suspect, are particularly dear to her heart. The little book is titled with the old, familiar "This World," the banner she flaunts at her masthead and never bauls down. The book is published by Chap-

Robert E. Rogersman and Grimes of Boston. I suspect that these columns are her favorites—or among them—because I seem to notice that whenever she seems to get particularly wound up in some idea like the justice of the Dickens fame, to drop into verse.

Written With a Bat

Verse, to be sure, but with an energetic swing and balance that is all her own, very different from her prose pieces. Her prose pieces are usually written with a baseball bat or something equally unbecoming and damaging to people's tender feelings. But when she gets all excited by something she has discovered about life and love and hate, life, death and immortality which has direct bearing on her own interesting and laborious and impetuous life, her feelings run away with her.

She will produce something as strong and lyrical and stunning as "I'm Proud," or "I Have Made a God" or "Monument to Love" or the brooding and wondering "Strange How I'm Made"—four pieces as different as can be, in four different moods.

But all are Elsie Robinson, incapable of being written by anybody in this world except Elsie Robinson, out of her own grief and pride and honesty and deliberate defiance at a world that won't listen.

Elsie Robinson is a pragmatic dramatist, with a certain number of hand-been, copper-colored, home-made ideas you can't pry out of her. Those ideas, I take it, are born out of her experience, not out of books and sermons.

She reads books and poetry and maybe even hears sermons, but if they do not match her pragmatic experience she will express the opinion, often with violence, that they are fakes.

Her little essay on "What Shall You Believe?" is swell pragmatism.

Take, for instance, her views on the female of the species. She knows 'em from the inside out, all about 'em, and most of what she says goes against the conventional traditions of old Southern chivalry, say.

If she would only put some of those into a little volume, call it "ELSIE ROBINSON ON WOMEN AND AND COM." I think she should have a book that would stack up splendidly with the pamphlets by the late Herr Schopenhauer and the extant Mr. Morison.

I think, in fact, I would prefer it even to her poetry.

The name might be said about her reflections on boys and girls, those magnificent applications of experience to the state of the pants.

"People are always intending to cut clippings out of newspapers, things they wish to preserve and remember, but really very few people do it."

If we did we should be as gods, knowing good and evil. But we don't—and we aren't.

I am sure that this little book of Elsie Robinson's contains many a short passage of strong free verse or hard-hitting prose that will be a comfort to all sorts of people, not the sophisticated, the know-it-alls, the intellectuals, the little groups of serious thinkers and such.

But the folks for whom she writes. The folks who need an antidote for grief, a stimulant for the spine, a splash of red-hot indignation on the inflamed ego, a philosophical hint (in homely phrase) on the big questions of why things are as they are and what we do about it—and on.

Lots of people would value this little book and profit by it. But that's the publisher's business. Munsie is to say "Howdy" and "Congratulations" to Elsie Robinson—and keep out of the range of her hell whip.

WIFE WON'T WEEP FOR ROGER BAKER

Says Mumsie Can Wait

If "Mumsie" wants to console Roger E. Baker while he serves his 12-to-22-year sentence, it is all right with his wife, Mrs. Bertha Baker.

And it is all right with her if Mary Mernieck, alias "Mumsie" Murdock, and Mrs. B., and her sister, Josephine, want to wait faithfully for the day when the baseball and restaurant impresario again walks the streets a free man.

So far as Mrs. Baker is concerned, she is all through with him. The book is published by Chap-

"I haven't a tear left in me," she said, at her Quincy home today, commending on the sentence that was imposed on Baker yesterday.

"I feel sorry for him at that," said the mother of his own children. "But an second thought, considering that other women and his crime, he got what he deserved."

"I will not visit him in prison and I will not allow my children to visit him."

Works for ERA
Mrs. Baker, who is working for the ERA to support herself and the children, said that her husband had refused to see her when she sought to visit him in the Charles Street Jail before his trial.

She also said that he did not answer the letters sent to him by his 17-year-old daughter, Natalie.

"We are all through," she went on, "as we were through several years ago. I don't count with him any more. The other woman does. Well, that's all right with me too."

"There are persons who think that I should get a divorce. But I have been strongly advised against it."

"I have an ERA job, and although I don't get much, I manage to get along with the help of my friends. The rest of my life will be devoted to my children."

Mrs. Baker said that through an arrangement with Baker's bankers she will remain at least temporarily in his home in Hildesheim avenue.

Modern Cinderella

Seeks 'Perfect Foot' Prize

She is the first out of the Nashua street building, Hildesheim, as she came as if from nowhere. Goodwin showed over and over again.

"My old gang. My old gang," she repeated, "I am glad to be back. You know that. You know what I'll do and I'll give you appreciate my coming back."

After the registrar plucked flowers from the tributes, he ordered the first out of the Children's Hospital.

On his plan, Goodwin was at it for two weeks. His attack on the "perfect foot" prize was a success. It was not without its difficulties, but it was a success.

"I love to play games. I like to play with my sister Gloria who is six but my sister Helen, what she wants to be a lawyer, is too smart and wants to play too much. It's not so much fun for her."

They crowded him to the second floor office. Inspector Edward G. O'Hara, liaison officer of the Boston Police, looked up the task of master of ceremonies. Deputy Registrar Anthony Bognanni and Goodwin's son, Carl, had arrived with him, but soon they were lost in the crush. His "old gang" called for a speech.

Goodwin faltered for a moment. His lips moved but not for a full minute did he manage to say:

"Why should my old gang need a speech? Well, if I have to make a speech, I've been in a lot of trouble fighting for you but I'll do it again. I'll be there."

"If course I'm glad to be back. You know that. You know what I'll do and I'll give you appreciate my coming back."

OLD REGISTRAR BACK ON JOB

SMACK!

A resounding kias from a pretty girl employee, cheers and shouts... and scores of misty eyes.

That was Frank A. Goodwin's greeting today when he returned to his old job as registrar of motor vehicles.

The ex-convict was Miss Martha A. Chalmers of Newton. Little work was done in the "new" office.

O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK
Day By Day

New York, Feb. 7.—The Dear Noel crowd wandered out after the first night's plushed performance recently, a bit bewildered.

All the familiar ingredients had been offered — a Coward authorship, Alfred Lunt, Lynda Fontanne and a Tiffany audience. But things didn't jell.

The usual bright heavens in the crushed about the Coward's worshippers. They had witnessed his first flop in America.

No amount of "cheering" or "tamping cold" could save it. Not even the presence of Noel himself, who admits he has "achieved a definite publicity value."

All the newspaper critics used their brains — and say without exception, and George Jessel. No, then is to be heard from.

The fact is the dear old tolerance built up for Coward simply burst under the strain.

Nearly all his plays, threaded with perversion, have been saved by brilliant dialogue.

Notably "Three Lives," "The Vortex" and "Design for Living" but which sophistication could not save this one.

When a barefooted boatman of a Caribbean island and the presence of Noel himself, who admits he has "achieved a definite publicity value."

"PLAN" of Townsend FLOPS

FAILS TO SEE MANSFIELD

No matter where his original idea for pensioning the old folks of 60 and over at $200 a month may wind up, one Townsend plan went askew today when Dr. Francis E. Townsend, 68-year-old Californian, attempted to confer with Mayor Mansfield.

Although the doctor had understood an appointment to have been made with Mayor Mansfield, the mayor just wasn't in when Dr. Townsend called with his secretary, Joseph H. Hays, to the mayor's office, declared that an appointment had been entered on the mayor's book.

Dr. Townsend's secretary said that an appointment certainly had been made.

So what was the visitor's desire, the mayor's secretary asked.

It turned out that the visitor's desire was the use of Faneuil Hall for tonight at a planned meeting of Townsend's adherents.

The mayor's office was sorry Faneuil Hall would cost $10 for the evening—a nominal charge, you know.

The tall, gaunt and lantern-jawed Dr. P. in Faneuil Hall, Dr. Townsend decided to leave afterward for Minneapolis.

Asked if he felt he had been snubbed by the mayor, Dr. Townsend said:

"No, there might have been a misapprehension."

Mayor Mansfield arrived at his office shortly after Townsend had left, with the probability that the two men had passed each other within the building.

According to the mayor, no definite appointment was made. Dr. Townsend had been made, and the Californian's representative had been told yesterday that Mansfield would make a call today before proceeding to City Hall.

The avowed purpose of Dr. Townsend's visit to Boston was to launch at least 500 Townsend clubs in New England.

Without missing Dr. Townsend's Boston stay any more pleasant, Karl Payne, executive secretary of the Massachusetts branch of the National Economic League, said the following letter today to all Massachusetts representatives in Congress.

"I do not want to insult your intelligence by even intimating that you would seriously consider the Townsend plan."

An "early to bed and early to rise" disciple, Townsend said at it in his Parker House quarters today, meeting with those who are already on the bandwagon.

"You'd the Townsend plan save the country?"

"It would restore the United States to bankruptcy and poverty."

"Just what, exactly, did I say?"

"It means that some eight million persons will lose their month deposited to their credit in banks. There will be checking accounts."

DOLL LADY Died of Exposure COURT TOLD

Solves Feb. 7—Mrs. Florence Pierce, the "Doll Lady," died of exposure after she had been beaten up, unmercifully, according to Medical Examiner S. Chase J. Carter.

The doctor was the principal witness in the five-week-old murder trial of Bernard Soboroff, 25-carload Peabody leather worker, who is blamed for the woman's death.

Dr. Carter said that his examination disclosed that the woman had been in a partly undressed state and that her nose had been shattered by a blow or blows. All of her teeth were loosened, he said.

Her face was covered with a powder smothered to her face, witnesses yesterday said that young Soboroff's sweater was covered with the same stuff.

Mother of Dying Baby Sought

All hospitals with maternity wards were being checked today in an effort to learn the identity of the five-week-old "motherless" baby who is critically ill at City Hospital.

Meanwhile police renewed their appeal to the unknown mother to come forward. The only clue they have is that the child was brought to a baby boarding house in Roxbury by a 20-year-old blonde girl, who gave the name of Mary Johnson and a fictitious Jamaica Plain address.

There were no identifying marks on the clothing of the babe, but some ink stains led police to believe the ink got on the clothing while the mother was signing discharge papers at the hospital. The baby has an abscessed ear.

INSANE Man's Death PROBED

GUARDS FACE DISMISSAL

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing of Plymouth county expected reports of an autopsy on William G. Register, dead Bridgewater State Farm patient, to show today whether the man had been "mauled" by three guards.

The trio of guards is under fire and a complete investigation of the manner of the death has been ordered by Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman.

Diablist of the three men, Lyman S. Claton, Kenneth Taylor and Peter Volz, was requested by Dr. William T. Hanson, physician in charge of the asylum.

Superintendent James E. Warren of the Bridgewater Institution, however, stands firmly by the accused men. He told Commissioner Lyman that Register, a violently insane patient, six different times attacked attendants during a six-year stay.

His reports, Commissioner Lyman said, showed that Register was the aggressor and fought viciously with his guards. He had been confined recently in the northeast section, reserved for particularly dangerous cases.

Register died on January 14, after being hospitalized for injuries received when he allegedly attacked Claton and the other two guards to the rescue of their fellow guard.

HELLO EVERYBODY:

FLOYD CIBRONS

It took a long time to bring him in. I thought he was gone. He was master of the sailing vessel, but it did not appear to be much of a boat. It was smashed into a steamer, he said. I thought it was a pleasure boat. I figured the rest of the crew would be in the boat. I thought it was the Surrus—such of them as hadn't got down in the ship. But the boat was not the mate had heard any cry from the side. The boat was not the mate that they probably wouldn't have heard anybody else to be heard.

Mr. Boston Baer Should Meet Hamas

By Jack Conway

EDWARD C. FOSTER, president of the National Boxing Association, today announced that a contest between the two champions should take place, having shown that the two fighters are of equal caliber. Foster said that he had received a letter from the promoters of the fight, and that he had decided to accept the challenge.

"What is your remedy for the 'Mr. Boston'?" asked the champion. "I don't know," answered Foster. "I don't know if he is a fighter or a clown."
